products over the years.

I don't know the knife model, but it was THE perfect size to carry in one's pocket. It had a nice number of 'tools' but not so much that it weighed down your pocket.

From that day, my Swiss Army knife and I were attached at the hip (almost literally) and would remain so for almost 24 years.

I carried it to work, to the barn, on vacation, and every night, I'd clean out my pockets, and place it and my keys on the kitchen counter.

And God help anyone who moved it.

At family events, while someone was opening a gift, I'd hear my name called for 'the knife' to cut the ribbon. It assembled countless items, and even rescued The Sidekick's sister once when the lock on the
