Get ready to laugh local at improv show

By Sam Hancock
Georgetown Little Improv Club

Do you like to #laugh? Then #laughlocal with #GLIC2015 #JAMBASHADO #HASHTAGS.

Due to contractual demands, on Friday, Aug. 21 and Saturday, Aug. 22, at 8 p.m. For $10, Georgetown Little Improv Club (GLIC) is hosting two more nights of our patent-pending show Improv Comedy Jam-bash-a-do.

Come to 33 Stewarttown Rd., home of the Georgetown Little Theatre (GLT) to see GLIC do what GLIC has done for nine years— create comedy gold from nothing but the slimmest of ideas.

Stories will be told that have never been told before, or will ever be told again. Characters will be created from thin air and be sustained with laughter and applause. If you don't laugh, there will be consequences! For the performers! Danger AND theatre combined? Why isn't this on now?

With coaching from professional improvisers (yes, there is such a job) Amy and Duncan MacKenzie of Oakville Improv Theatre Company, this year GLIC has refined what they've been winging for nine years. Now, audiences can see longer, more nuanced improv about gassy gangsters lost in space. Aren't you lucky?

Why are you not calling 905-877-3422 right now to see if you can hold tickets? THEY ARE LIMITED. #LaughLocal with #GLIC2015. Family friendly, but be warned your kids may laugh too.

Two headliners sign on for Rock the Hills

Are you and your friends looking for an absolutely epic way to end your summer?

Rock the Hills will host its second annual music festival on Saturday, Aug. 22 at the Georgetown Fairgrounds.

Be prepared to experience great live music and fun activities. Many activities from last year's event, such as henna tattooing and the colour fight, will be reprised this year.

Along with a variety of talented local acts, this year's event will also feature two headliners instead of one. The Rock the Hills team presents Virginia to Vegas ('We Are the Stars') and Young Empires ('The Gates') as this year's headlining acts.

Digital tickets are available online on the official Rock the Hills website or you can purchase tickets, which are available at Silvercreek Cafe, Mess Hall Poutinerie, Acton Roxy, and Pat's Deli. Tickets are $30 for general admission and $50 for two.
