PEACEFUL MESSAGE: There was a local presence when Ahmadiyya Muslim Jama'at Canada held its Jalsa Salana, which is Canada's the largest National Islamic Convention on Aug. 28-30 in Mississauga. Keynote speaker was Prime Minister Stephen Harper. The three-day event, which attracts several thousand attendees from across the globe offers a host of scholarly speeches and presentations that aim to deliver the true and peaceful message of Islam, as well as practical solutions to combat various forms of religious extremism. Hanan Sobhi (left), Waseem Ahmad (right), and Salman Arain were among the many Muslim attendees from Georgetown. "I have been attending this convention for the past eight years and every year I learn something new. This year was no different, as I discovered that there is no conflict in Islam between freedom of speech and freedom of religion, although extremist organizations would have you think otherwise. The Ahmadiyya Muslim Jama'at's refreshing message of pluralism, love, and tolerance is a breath of fresh air and it is something that everyone can apply to their daily lives— Muslims and non-Muslims alike!" said Hanan.
