

Dealing with leftover fertilizer

If you are left with extra fertilizer at the end of the season, do you know what to do with it? The experts at Fertilizer Canada have some advice:

Use it

Best practices for lawn and garden care advise feeding your lawn every other month beginning when the ground is no longer frozen and stopping with that important last application in the fall. The extra nutrients will provide food to keep grass healthy during the coldest weather and boost root growth to reach deeply stored moisture reserves.

Share it

All living things need food, including lawns and gardens. If you have leftover fertilizer at the end of the season, share it with family, neighbours, friends, or a community group.

Store it

Keep any leftover fertilizer sealed in its original container in a dry place for use next season.
