

BRIDES

The fabric of choice this year is lace

This year promises to bring another exciting bridal season with designers paying special attention to detail, design elements and structure.

The fabric of choice this season is lace. Lace, lace and more lace! Sculpted bodices with corset-style backs that provide support and emphasize the curves. Dramatic drop waists, fit and flare and trumpet style gowns continue to rule the runways... feminine gowns with a touch of traditional styling.

While strapless gowns remain the style of choice, brides looking for something more modest have more choices in 2016 with gowns featuring lace straps and detailed illusion backs in every collection.

Elizabeth's will be hosting two designer Trunk Shows Jan. 28 to 30 and Feb. 4-6 featuring the latest collections from the hottest designers this season: Essense of Australia and Stella York.

Colour reigns in these collections this season, Vintage inspired shades of gold, moscato and cafe accent the lace creating depth and richness.

The bridesmaids selections grow each and every season with tons of colors to choose from. Look for dresses made with quality fabrics and structure in the lining to help your bridal party look their best. Trending for 2016 are all the soft neutral shades gold, cashmere, blush and soft mauves and pink are strong colors for the upcoming season.

Erin Burke models an Essense of Australia ivory/gold-coloured ball-style wedding gown for her mother Heather Burke, manager of Elizabeth's Fashions on Main St. The gown also comes with a crystal embellishment at the waist.

The mothers of the bride and groom have an important role to play and should choose a style in keeping with the tone of the wedding. Moms are much younger in their fashion sense today, so strapless gowns or halter-style necklines are very acceptable and can be fitted with wraps or boleros to provide coverage for the ceremony
