The Halton Hills Chamber of Commerce believes there are many discussions happening in the business world, and they have created a forum where people can talk about them.

Politics Unplugged is aimed at a business audience, focusing on questions that are business-related.

Chamber manager Kathleen Dills said she anticipates discussions on transit and transportation, business competitiveness, international trade, tax and employment. Other, broader topics, such as the state of the economy, are also up for discussion.

ber's economic development committee discusses initiatives for the year, and plans for Politics Unplugged started last year.

"This is a chance to discuss game-changing issues as a community and hear perspectives from our elected officials," Dills wrote in an email, noting Wellington-Halton Hills MPP Ted Arnott and MP

Michael Chong will be in attendance Thursday night.

On Jan. 18, Politics Unplugged will take place at the Club at North Halton. The forum is for business people, and is available to chamber of commerce members.
