THEATRE

Play's theme went from funny to dramatic

Georgetown Little Theatre read it, and reworked it with Halsall, the play was ready to be produced.

"Eventually I submitted it to the group to say 'OK, what do you think?' and they said 'Let's do it.'"

He removed himself from the rehearsal process

Halsall says he made the decision not to be so deeply involved in the rehearsal process, so that he is able to see his play through the lens of a spectator.

"I wanted to see (the play) the way the audience would see it - fresh - and so I was involved in helping to build the set, but I have not really seen exactly what they've done," he added. "It's also an education for me to see what a director will do with your stuff, so I think it's a learning process anyway."

What's next for Halsall? He's not telling much, but he has a few more plays in the works. For more information on Boxed In, visit <http://www.georgetown-littletheatre.ca/>.
