Jailbirds sing for Halton's Crime Stoppers to escape slammer

The so-called inmates participating in Friday's Jail-A-Thon to raise funds for Crime Stoppers of Halton were calling out as many favours as possible to buy their release, raising a total of $6,800.

Jailbirds at the Georgetown Market Place Shopping Centre included prominent Halton Region officials, business people and community members who were given a dollar figure to raise by "Crown attorney" Cal Millar, chair of Crime Stoppers of Halton, and weren't freed until that figure was reached.

Cal Millar received the most donations on the day with $1,252, while youngster Caleigh Wood of Oakville collected $1,035 to secure her release.

The largest single donation was $500 from the Fleet Safety Council of Toronto for Jailbird Mike

Kelly Montague, vice president and publisher of Metroland West, spent some time behind bars waiting for family and friends to come through with donations to free her from the jail cell guarded by Halton Regional Police community mobilization officer Const. Dennis Dimitroff during the Crime Stoppers of Halton Jail-A-Thon on Friday at the Georgetown Market Place Shopping Centre. Montague, known as Inmate 711, was bailed out by Judge Bryan Lewis after raising $610 for Crime Stoppers of Halton.
