Kilic also uses sterling silver and precious stones to create her pieces. Her studio space is located in the Main Street Studios building; Glass artist Skytree Smith at work in the studio. Smith first began working as a glass artist in 2005. Both an artist and funeral director, Smith often incorporates cremated remains into her glass designs to reflect the beauty in human beings even after death.

Take a virtual tour of Williams Mill

At Williams Mill, renovations are complete and artists are moving in to their new studio spaces.

What previously existed as a gallery and gift shop, the newly revitalized Main Street Studios is now open for business.

Along with the sculpting studio, which also received a makeover, there are five new studios, now home to oil painter Shelley Newman, painter and jewelry maker Carol-Ann Michaelson, sculptor Zsuzsa Monostory, glass jewelry maker Berna Kilic and encaustic artist Sue McNeily.

Williams Mill will be hosting a grand opening celebration on May 5 and 6 from 12 to 5 p.m., where guests can peruse the new studios, meet the artists, partake in live demonstrations and enjoy some light refreshments. For more information, visit <https://www.main-street-studios.com/>.
