Georgetown Home Hardware hosts Brownies

BEVERLY TYHURST

The fifth Georgetown Brownie unit, together with their fathers, were welcomed by the Georgetown United Home Hardware Building Centre to a Dad and Me bird house building night on April 30.

The Brownies and their dads were provided instruction on tool use and bird house construction, as well as safety rules for using woodworking tools and protective equipment.

All had a great time building, painting and decorating their individual bird houses that were donated by the Georgetown United Home Hardware Building Centre.

Hospital workers get contract settlement

ALEXANDRA HECK
aheck@metroland.com

Workers at the Georgetown Hospital and across the province are breathing a sigh of relief after receiving a settlement in their union contract dispute.

Last month workers at the Georgetown Hospital rallied outside the building with signs, trying to raise awareness about the fact that they'd been working without a contract since September.

CUPE and the Ontario Council of Hospital Unions (OCHU) announced that they came to an agreement with the Ontario Hospital Association, after coming back to the negotiating table this year.

The hospital association was asking for concessions regarding a reduction in sick pay, changes to seniority ranking and increase the employee share of benefits.

OCHU and CUPE say these concessions were not made, and that wage increases for workers will be retroactive, to the end of September when their previous contract expired.
