Helsons Law Firm celebrates grand opening

Helsons Law Firm has officially opened a second location in Acton - and it feels a little like coming home.

The firm, which has been in operation since the 1800s, has had a location in Acton before, which opened in 1930 in a unit above a café.

"In some respects, we are kind of returning, because this was a café that we have converted," senior partner Allan Kogon said, referring to the former Starlight Café.

Despite the bout of nostalgia the historical building brings for its new owners, the office at 35 Mill St. E is not without its newly renovated perks. Helsons purchased the building in September, and renovations commenced in January and include wheelchair-accessible front doors, new floors, added insulation and soundproof rooms for client privacy.

Kogon said he believes, from a business standpoint, it is an ideal time to provide Acton residents with another law firm.

"Acton is at a bit of a changing point in its history ... and a number of lawyers who have been here forever are on the verge of retiring," Kogon said.

"So we saw that, from a business point of view, Acton was underserved with lawyers, so we are hoping to provide a service."

Kogon added that though Helsons has historically served Acton clients, they have had to attend the Georgetown office. He said the new office will provide them with added convenience in that regard.

The Acton location will have four acting lawyers and support staff. The firm offers a number of legal services, including real estate purchases and sales, preparing wills and powers of attorney, assisting in the administration of estates, incorporating businesses, family law issues, civil litigation, driving offences and criminal charges.
