ACTON'S LEGAL PRACTITIONERS 'HERE FOR THE LONG RUN'

RE: Helsons Law Firm celebrates grand opening in Acton, Georgetown Independent, July 19 issue

Just a short note to clarify the assertion made in the story about the opening of the Helsons Law Firm office in Acton. The rationale for doing so was that Acton has "a number of lawyers who have been here forever and are on the verge of retiring."

If they had checked their facts beforehand, they would have not been so presumptuous in making this statement.

The legal practitioners who have served this community for decades will definitely be here for the long run, despite the certitude of Mr. Kogon's remark that we, superannuated relics, are perhaps past our prime and ready for the legal boneyard. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Nonetheless, may I say, on behalf of the current lawyers in Acton that we welcome our newest colleagues to our fair town and look forward to contributing, with them, to the provision of legal services to a community we have served for so long and so well before their foray into the local scene.

DEVELOPER SHOULD FINISH GEORGETOWN PROJECT BEFORE MOVING ON TO NEW COMMUNITY

RE: SilverCreek group starting new project in Napanee, Georgetown Independent, July 26 issue I was somewhat shocked to read that the McGibbon condo developer SilverCreek announced plans for a new development in Napanee. Perhaps they should finish the project they started here in Georgetown first. Don Jackson, vice-president and general manager of SilverCreek Communities, is quoted as saying "Napanee is refreshingly one of the municipalities that actually has a vision." This sounds like a dig on Georgetown to me, rightfully or wrongfully.

They need to finish what they started here.

Over 90 buyers, mostly locals, have made deposits on the McGibbon project. According to published reports, the project is stalled.

Since the initial and recent reports by the Independent, there has been no news.
