NAV Canada is looking to change some of the arrival and departure procedures for air traffic at Pearson after hearing numerous complaints about overhead noise.

In recent years NAV Canada changed the arrival flights procedure which brought all incoming planes down one path which crossed over Georgetown south.

"It's like a funnel over Georgetown south," said Jane Fogal, regional councillor who attended a recent meeting with NAV Can officials alongside other Halton Hills councillors Ann Lawlor and Bob Inglis.

The organization is rolling out six new techniques to mitigate overhead noise in Oakville and Georgetown as the result of an independent commissioned study on the noise effects of flight traffic incoming and outgoing over suburban areas surrounding the airport.

"For us, it's the arrivals," said Fogal. "What they can do is have them higher when they come over Georgetown and drift down."

The five other changes involve reducing noise on take off, which affect neighbouring communities in the GTA. One is to change the departure
