

MUNICIPAL ELECTION

been a massive shift in thinking toward transit in Halton Hills.

"We know we're on the right track," she said, explaining that residents and even the chamber of commerce have expressed interest in having a transit system in town.

"It's giving people options," said Fogal, explaining that transit in town would give families the option of having fewer vehicles, it would give others the opportunity to get a job across town, for students to get around to events, sports program, it would give seniors more independence and spontaneity, without having to book the Activan services a day in advance.

"When change comes, it's an opportunity to add things and improve our quality of life," said Fogal, talking about the growth of Halton Hills. She says that when she entered municipal politics, the town had only one arena, no biking or walking trails and a fairly inaccessible library.

Alexandra Heck/Metroland

Jane Fogal is a regional councillor for wards three and four in the town of Halton Hills. She is passionate about recreation, sustainable development and environmentalism, as well as serving the town.

"We're now the tenth best community to live in," she said.

With ground set to break on Vision Georgetown in 2021, Fogal says it's an opportunity for the town to build a spectacular community.

"We really need to get it right," she said, talking about the planning for a community that has ample parks, trails and amenities.

"I'm going to keep pushing for better standards on our development agreements," she said, explaining that details like the amount of top soil left on properties, erosion safeguards and silt fencing are important for the town to negotiate with developers.

"I want this to be a wonderful, beautiful, livable community," she said.
