The franchise that promises to "make you a pizza you can't refuse" has entered downtown Georgetown.

Co-owner Rick Taddeo says with the design of the Italian gangster-inspired eatery, Goodfellas made it their goal to create a setting that transports the diner.

"We try to bring a lot of the outside inside, with the stone and brick elements," he said. "We try to create that type of environment. When you walk in the door, it takes you somewhere else, whether it be Europe, New York - some place other than Georgetown."

And walk down the stairs to be transported to a completely different place: Eastern State Penitentiary. The basement portion of the restaurant contains a private dining area, with a recreation of Al Capone's Philadelphia prison cell, surrounded by photos and other documentation, including a copy of the gangster's death certificate.

The Goodfellas southern Italian style menu offers up plenty of options for a variety of palates and dietary restrictions, including gluten-free and vegetarian items.

Their signature dish is Neapolitan wood oven pizza, and Taddeo says the most popular orders are for the margherita (San Marzano tomato sauce, mozzarella di latte cheese, extra virgin olive oil and fresh
