Sherwin-Williams managers from all over Canada visited Halton Hills this week to freshen up the Georgetown Bread Basket.

As part of their training process, new managers are taken across the nation, where they participate in community initiatives to gain hands-on experience with Sherwin-Williams products, as well as an opportunity to give back to various communities, national product manager Frank Flores said.

On Sept. 27, the new managers rolled up their sleeves and got to work on Mountainview Road North, giving the Georgetown Bread Basket two fresh coats of paint.

"Our goal here is to make it look nice and uniform. We use durable paint that is easy to maintain and wash," Flores said. "We have a store just next door and wherever we have a store, we want to give back to the community."
