THEIFP.CA IS CHANGING FOR THE BETTER

The Georgetown Independent and Free Press website, theifp.ca, is changing.

Readers are being asked to register for full access to the website and to its many local news stories and event listings.

Registered users of theifp.ca are given the ability to add their comments to our stories, submit their events for publication, and to submit their own photos and stories for publication. By registering on theifp.ca, readers gain access to many other Metroland Media community websites with a single login, including save.ca, life-news.ca, autocatch.com and 26 other community news websites.

"We are pleased that we are continuing to enhance our readers' experience by increasing and refining content that is the most relevant to them and their communities," said Ian Oliver, executive vice president of Community Brands and Operations. We love being part of your community and we've also invested in much more, extremely local news and helpful information."

"As your trusted source of local news, we will continue to provide you with this essential service. We also need your help. We will be looking to you - our readers - to register in order to receive full access to our content. As our business transforms, this information will allow us to understand your needs and deliver content that is relevant to you," said Kelly Montague, vice president and Metroland West regional publisher.

In addition to finding local news and events, you can also sign up for our popular daily and weekly newsletters including daily headlines, weekly event listings, advice, books, travel, personal finance and more.

Registering is easy. Registration for free, limited-time access to the latest important local news, opinions and insight is easy. Later, your continued access will require a paid subscription.

Visit theifp.ca and follow the prompts that will guide you through the registration process: you can even use your Google or Facebook credentials to create an account.
