How to make the holidays truly wondrous for kids

(NC) Today's children are exposed to so much. Smartphones in hands, kids browse a world of endless content, often for many hours each day. That digital world is full of wonderful stuff, but it's also populated with content we never imagined our kids would encounter.

The holiday season is a chance to reclaim some childhood wonder, right here in the real world.

It's not about trees loaded with tinsel, or piles of expensive presents. Real wonder lies in family time, in breaks from routine, and in the gently falling snow. It's found in beloved traditions and new adventures alike.

Here are a few ways to restore childhood wonder this year:

Spend time with them. This is likely the single biggest gift you can give your kids. Laugh. Listen. Tell stories. Make pancakes, instead of rushing out to the mall.

Make new friends. What about the family that's just arrived on the street? The elderly neighbour who always seems lonely? Invite someone to your home and enjoy making them welcome.

Share an old tradition. What did you love doing as a child? Cut out snowflakes together and decorate the front window. What about watching all the old TV specials, like How the Grinch Stole Christmas?

Start a new tradition. Perhaps it's skating in the park on Christmas Eve, then toasting marshmallows over the barbecue. Brainstorm with your kids.

Change a life together. Buy gifts for a less fortunate family. Visit a retirement home or help at the local food bank. Volunteer at a community event that provides free Christmas dinner.
