

ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS THREATENED

boulevard, I know, they look bad, but when people call and they are practically in tears because they are getting these $30 tickets over and over again, I have no answer for them," Fogal added. "I think this is great that we are going to pause and have a look at this."

Bonnette says he has received emails from some residents who have not yet received a ticket, but worry that they are next.

"It is an issue," he said. "And we have a motion in front of us."

He added he is also concerned with recent instances of parking enforcement officers being threatened by local residents.

"People that we employ are going out and doing their job and that's the by-law and that's what they are to do. They hear complaints and they go out and ticket," he said, noting that residents threatening officers will have to be dealt with by police.

Town staff are currently working toward a solution to boulevard parking concerns, which will be formally presented to council for consideration next month.

OPINION

STORY ON TALKING TO KIDS ABOUT CANNABIS IMPRESSES READER

I'd like to thank David Lea for writing the article (Dec. 27, IFP) about how to talk to kids about cannabis.

I liked the quotes from Cynthia Lindsay, the public health nurse from Halton Region; she really examined many of the old arguments that I have had with individuals over the course of my lifetime regarding cannabis use: "But it's natural," and "Adults do it, so why not kids?"

And she's provided readers with some solid perspectives and responses to those questions.

I am looking forward to the other articles in the series.

For the record, I am not against cannabis for individuals over 25 and the chronically ill. However, I am against it for anyone under 25 because of the reasons stated in your article: the developing brain.

Great research and awesome delivery of this material on a sensitive topic.

Thank you again. It was informative and will help us parents navigate this complex topic.
