ACTON EUCHRE PLAYERS RAISE OVER $2,700 FOR STUDENTS

An Acton community group has proved local change can happen when like-minded people get together and play some cards.

On March 23, the Acton Curling Club was filled to capacity with more than 100 community members taking part in a euchre night for a purpose. All proceeds of the event went to the Halton Learning Foundation (HLF), which helps to eliminate financial barriers to learning and enhance the school experience for students of the Halton District School Board (HDSB).

After the success of three years of monthly euchre nights, Tammy Somerville, and her husband, Dave, began preparations for an event that would make lasting change in the Acton community.

"If we were going to do something bigger, we wanted it to benefit a cause near and dear to a participant's heart," said Somerville, the event organizer and system vice principal of school programs for the HDSB. "I knew I wanted to do this for HLF, because I knew I wanted to give back to Acton."

In the end, more than $2,700 was raised to support financially vulnerable students of the HDSB, who require help for basics such as food, clothing and school supplies in order to fully participate in learning. Almost 60 Acton students have received support from HLF this school year.

"If you are a child in need, it can be tough to fit in at school or to focus on learning," said Lesley Mansfield, executive director of HLF. "This incredible donation will ensure more Acton students will receive the support they need to be successful."
