VOLLEYBALL A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITIES FOR SPORTS HALL OF FAMER

HERB GARBUTT

Joanne Berentson (Bingham) was in Grade 8 and already stood five-foot-10 when her dad introduced her to Grant Clatworthy, his fellow teacher and coach at Georgetown District High School (GDHS).

Berentson played pretty much every sport imaginable, but Clatworthy's saw a lot of potential in his area of expertise.

"He said he was going to make a volleyball player out of me," Berentson recalls.

He would deliver on that promise.

Berentson would go on to lead Clatworthy's GDHS team to a provincial high school title before accepting a scholarship at Western Michigan University, where she would set several records that still stand today.

She followed that up with playing with the Canadian national team at the world championships, and later having a pro career in Europe.

"I thought maybe I could play in college, and you always knew Team Canada was out there," Berentson said. "It opened up so much for me. I didn't even know pro volleyball existed when I was in high school."

Berentson, who now lives in Arizona, also wasn't aware there was a Halton Hills Sports Museum Hall of Fame until she found out she had been nominated. Now she is part of the 2019 class that includes Emily Boycott,
