NEWS HALTON HILLS CHAMPIONS COMMUNITY BETTER CHALLENGE

BRYAN MYERS bmyers@metroland.com

Halton Hills residents have a good excuse to get active: The Community Better Challenge.

Between May 25 and June 16, residents are encouraged to participate by simply being more active.

The most active community during that period will receive $150,000 for physical activity initiatives.

The Challenge rallies communities from coast to coast to sit less and move more. According to Statistics Canada, only 18 per cent of Canadian adults get the recommended amount of physical activity.

"Wouldn't it be great for Canada's most patriotic town to also become Canada's most active community?" Mayor Rick Bonnette said in a prepared release. "Our community embraces the health benefits and fun that go along with physical activities and are already champions."

The town will host 16 free activities over the two-week challenge period, including swims, skates, yoga, and tai chi in the park. Participants log their activity times at community.participaction-.com or on the ParticipAC-TION app available on the Apple App Store and Google Play.
