GEORGETOWN ATHLETE DESIGNS DOUGHNUT FOR TIM HORTONS DAY OF INCLUSION

A local athlete will see her doughnut creation sold in Tim Hortons across the country.

Tori Ranson, a 26-year-old Georgetown woman, designed this year's Special Olympics doughnut. On July 20 - Tim Hortons Day of Inclusion - Ranson's creation will be sold at nearly 4,000 locations across Canada, with all proceeds going to the Special Olympics.

"We put the challenge out to Special Olympic athletes to come up with their own designs," said Zack Pryzbek, manager of marketing for Tim Hortons.

From about 700 entrants, Ranson's design was chosen to be sold during the second annual Day of Inclusion on July 20.

The doughnut is a cross between a honey cruller, a Boston cream, and a vanilla dip. A honey cruller topped with vanilla fondant and red sprinkles is cut in half and filled with whipped topping.

"100 per cent of the proceeds from the Special Olympics doughnut go back to help Canadians with intellectual disabilities," Pryzbek said.

Ranson started participating in the Special Olympics when she was 14, and continues to compete in athletics, rhythmic gymnastics, basketball, soccer, and swimming.

Jim di Natale, franchise owner for the three Tim Hortons' locations in Georgetown, said pre-orders for the Special Olympics doughnut were already happening.

In Georgetown pre-orders are available at any Tim Hortons location (11 Mountainview Rd. N., 326 Guelph St., or 373 Mountainview Rd. S.).
