LETTER TO THE EDITOR JUST SIGNS WON'T HALT DANGEROUS DRIVERS

Speeding on residential streets is so rampant, someone is going to be seriously hurt or killed.

I live on a one-way street where drivers not only exceed the speed limit but also go the wrong way.

There isn't a speed limited posted, sidewalks are only on part of the street, plus, there's a school at the one end.

I understand there is a process, but asking residents to post signs politely asking drivers to slow down is not a deterrent for these unsafe, distracted and reckless drivers.

gardless for children, pedestrians or cyclists. The stark reality of how ineffectual these signs are was demonstrated to me when I saw a baby carriage parked at the roadside near one.

Speed bumps, increased police presence, stop signs, radar cameras, flashing lights, substantial fines and charges - surely one of these can be implemented. If speed bumps are the best deterrent, install them! Anti-speed-bump sentiments will disappear, as will the speeding cars - problem solved.

My hope is that a solution can be quickly implemented so we don't read about that baby buggy being dragged into the street by a speeding car - not empty, but with a child in it.
