

5 FACTS ABOUT ACTON'S FALL FAIR

BRYAN MYERS
bmyers@metroland.com

The Acton Fall Fair is put on by the Acton Agricultural Society. Prior to 1913, Acton and Georgetown's agricultural societies were combined, alternating the location of the festival each year. However, in 1913, the societies parted ways, making this year's fall fair the 106th for Acton.

The fair runs Sept. 20 to 22, at the Acton Fairgrounds. Admission to the fair starts at $10 for adults, $8 for youths (13 to 17) and seniors, $4 for children (five to 12), and free for children under five. A three-day pass is $20, and can only be purchased in advance from most banks in Acton.

How's your aim? - New this year, the junior board of the Acton Agricultural Society is holding a hay bale throwing contest. The board has 18 members between the ages of 10 and 17 and has been active for about four years.

All of Acton will be there ... then some - Between 8,000 and 10,000 visitors are expected at the fair over three days, and Acton has about 9,500 residents. About 1,000 students will attend Education Day held on Friday.

seasonal fashion show, including members of the audience, and ride tickets will be awarded at the show.

That's a lot of babies - About 50 to 70 babies participate in the baby show.

Young Entrepreneur's Marketplace - For three hours on Saturday, young entrepreneurs between the ages of six and 18 can promote their business, from baby-sitting to busking to crafts, at no charge.
