A Georgetown woman's extensive volunteering has been recognized with an award from Western University.

Lois Fraser recently received the 2019 Alumni Award for Community Service from her alma mater - an honour that pays tribute to alumni who've made outstanding volunteer contributions in their community.

The local woman began volunteering as a student at Western and has continued to serve others in a wide variety of capacities for more than 45 years.

Over the course of more than three decades she held the positions of board member, volunteer and 10-year president with Georgetown Globe Productions, and also co-founded and managed the Georgetown Children's Chorus for 25 years.

As chair of the Heritage Foundation of Halton Hills, she's currently spearheading the campaign to create the Lucy Maud Montgomery Museum and Literary Arts Centre in Norval.

Beyond the award from Western, Fraser's hard work has been recognized by the province with the 2014 Ontario Medal for Good Citizenship and the Lions Club, which named her Georgetown's Citizen of the Year in 1995.
