BUSINESS

WAYNE PARRISH NAMED SENIOR VP EDITORIAL

Wayne Parrish, an award-winning reporter, editor and digital media leader, is Torstar's new senior vice-president editorial.

Parrish will focus on editorial transformation, including content science and data analytics, for Torstar's newspapers, which include the Toronto Star, six additional Ontario dailies and more than 70 community newspapers.

"Wayne Parrish brings a wealth of experience, a history of digital innovation and a burning desire for our papers to flourish," said Torstar chair John Honderich.

"What's more, he is an accomplished journalist, who knows who we are and what we stand for."

Parrish, 64, who won two National Newspaper

Awards as a sports reporter at the Star in the early 1980s, has held executive leadership positions at Postmedia Network, Quebecor and Sun Media.

Parrish's digital experience includes launching CANOE, which became Canada's premiere internet network-portal and top news and information site for more than a decade.

He launched Postmedia's digital subscription program, consulted on a sports-only digital subscription business in the U.S., and developed the new media unit of Quebecor.

"He's definitely a seasoned executive and he's one of those rare people who has a lot of digital experience, a lot of news experience and a lot of transformation experience," said Torstar president John Boynton. "So he's going to be able to hit the ground running really early and help Torstar with the overall transformation."

The appointment is effective Jan. 27, 2020.
