Through economic uncertainty caused by COVID-19, the Town of Halton Hills' Premier Gateway has continued to move forward.

"I think it is particularly important right now that we share and celebrate good news," Mayor Rick Bonnette, said. "That's why I'm so pleased to advise that Toromont is the latest company to establish their headquarters in Halton Hills."

Toromont CIMCO, a manufacturer of industrial and recreational refrigeration equipment, plans to open an 84,000-square-foot manufacturing facility in the Gateway that is anticipated to create more than 200 jobs.

"The Town of Halton Hills provided attentive, prompt and meaningful services that enabled us to successfully complete our due diligence for a local land purchase on a very tight timeline," Reeve Whitman, manager of corporate facilities at Toromont, said. "Each and every department were accessible and engaged at town hall and were able to nurture external relations with the region, Halton Conservation, and MTO."

Brent Marshall, chief administrative officer for the town, said the town's success in attracting investment stems from a commitment to remain "open for business" during the pandemic.

"We have implemented a number of new actions in addition to continuing to process new and existing development applications and advancing the business concierge initiative — a process to fast-track approvals for major investments," Marshall said. "Staff is conducting virtual building permit inspections; conducted a COVID-19 business survey and established an Economic Support and Recover Task Force."
