BRYAN MYERS

It was a virtual record breaker — literally.

Hosting the first virtual edition of its annual Walk or Run for Georgetown Hospital event, the Georgetown Hospital Foundation set new records — both in terms of money raised and the number of participants.

This year's fundraiser took in $70,000. A record amount of teams took part

While this year's Run or Walk for Georgetown Hospital went virtual, the event raised a record-breaking $70,000.

while staying safe by participating virtually on their own routes.

Funds raised will be directed to the hospital's urgent needs including new in-patient beds that will replace beds currently at the end of their life cycle.

"We are so thankful to all the participants, sponsors, donors, and volunteers for helping make this event such a success this year, despite the challenges COVID-19 has presented," Betty D'Oliviera, volunteer chair of the events committee, said.

"Our community's record-breaking fundraising efforts at this event will have a positive impact on our patients at our community hospital for years to come."
