WEEKLY ROUNDUP: HALTON ENTERS RED ZONE AS ANOTHER LOCKDOWN LOOMS

In the week that saw Halton Region enter the COVID-19 red zone along with other areas — the regions of Hamilton, Peel and York, as well as the City of Toronto — there has been an "alarming" level of resurgence in new COVID-19 cases.

During an announcement on Nov. 13, Premier Doug Ford said that the province is "staring down the barrel of another lockdown."

The red zone gives way to more stringent measures to control the spread of the virus, including:

- Gathering limit for all organized public events and social gatherings to 10 people indoors and 25 people outdoors.

The numbers also apply to gyms and fitness studios.

- All sports and recreational programs in other facilities (arenas and multiplexes) limited to 10 people per room indoors and 25 outdoors.

- Team sports must not be practised or played except for training (no games or scrimmage).

- No contact permitted for team or individual sports.

- Maximum number of patrons permitted to be seated indoors for dining/restaurants is 10.

- Dancing, singing and the live performance of brass or wind instruments are prohibited.

As for the number of cases, data from the website of Halton Public Health shows that from Nov. 12 to 18 there were 316 new infections across Halton, an increase from 299 posted the previous week.

The number of active cases stood at 297, up two from last week. There were also 19 resolved cases.

Outbreaks at various long-term-care and retirement homes also resulted in more deaths.

As of Nov. 18, there have been 3,092 confirmed and probable COVID-19 cases in Halton since the pandemic started, with 2,485 considered resolved and 47 deaths.
