WEEKLY ROUNDUP: STAY-AT-HOME ORDER DECLARED

With COVID-19 cases continuing to climb, the Ontario government declared a second provincial emergency and issued a stay-at-home order.

The announcement was made by Ontario Premier Doug Ford on Jan. 12, stating that the latest measures are necessary to "save lives" and prevent the province's hospital system from collapsing.

"The latest modelling data shows that Ontario is in a crisis and, with the current trends, our hospital ICUs will be overwhelmed in a few short weeks with unthinkable consequences," said Ford in a news release.

"We need people to only go out only for essential trips to pick up groceries or go to medical appointments. By doing the right thing and staying home, you can stay safe and save lives," he said.

Across Halton, the week also saw more resident deaths reported in long-term-care homes due to the virus. Several new outbreaks were declared, including at Allendale long-term-care home in Milton — just a few days after the previous outbreak at the facility was declared over.

Data from the Halton Public Health website shows that from Jan. 8 to 14, there were 557 new infections in the region, down from 748 posted the previous week.

The number of active cases stood at 442, including 111 in Burlington, 156 in Milton, 130 in Oakville, and 45 in Halton Hills.

As of Jan. 15, there have been 7,370 COVID-19 cases in Halton since the pandemic started, with 6,697 considered resolved and 137 deaths.
