DUCK CROSSING SIGNS INSTALLED ON BUSY ROAD

Melanie Hennessey/Metroland

Why did the ducks cross the road? To visit their favourite watering holes.

Now, some of Georgetown's cutest feathered friends will have a safer expedition to private ponds on Maple Avenue as the town has installed duck crossing signs.

JUST THE FACTS

- According to town staff, the municipality was contacted by a resident concerned about the safety of ducks crossing the busy road as they travel to and from the private ponds located at the golf club at North Halton and on the north side of Maple Avenue.

- Local resident Jodie McGucken said the G&G women's golfing group reached out to the town about the issue after a second duck died crossing the road.

- The town then installed two duck crossing signs on Maple Avenue, east of Halton Hills Drive and west of Gardiner Drive West, in early January.

- "We just want to make sure the public is aware to slow down in this section so we don't lose anymore (ducks)," said McGucken.

- The ducks are said to make their pilgrimage across the road twice a day.
