The Ontario government has lifted the stay-at-home order in Halton and other regions, as the Province moved to a new colour-coded COVID-19 framework, which comes with more restrictions depending on the stage.

To further limit the spread of the disease — including the more contagious variant of COVID-19 — the Province also announced that it is pushing back March break to April 12.

"This decision was made with the best advice of public health officials, including Ontario's chief medical officer of health and local medical officers of health," Education Minister Stephen Lecce said on Feb. 11. "At this time, it is critical that we continue to prioritize the health and safety of students, staff and families."

In Halton, the number of new cases is trending down, though the disease continues to claim more lives.

Data from the region's website shows that from Feb. 5 to Feb. 11, there were 249 new infections in the region. The number of active cases stood at 229, including 51 in Halton Hills, 57 in Milton, 71 in Oakville and 50 in Burlington.

As of Feb. 11, there have been 8,912 COVID-19 cases in Halton since the pandemic started, with 8,330 marked as resolved and 179 deaths.
