Chairlifts will be limited to two visitors at opposite ends of the chair this season.

10 THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT
SAFETY MEASURES AT GLEN EDEN

As one can imagine, things will look a little different on the local ski/snowboard scene this year.

Given the green light to open this week, Glen Eden will have a number of new safety protocols in place to protect both its guests and employees. Here's what you need to know.

- Reservations must now be made for all visitors, for a maximum of four-hour time slots.

- Visitors will be required to complete a health screening before taking to the hills, while staff will have to complete a health screening before each shift.

- Both staff and visitors must wear face masks at all times, both indoors and outdoors.

- Staff and visitors will be required to keep a distance of two metres (six feet) between members of other households, at all times, both indoors and outdoors.

- Visitors are encouraged to get dressed at home or in the parking lot, as much as possible, as capacity in the lodges will be reduced and lockers will not be available.

- Seating arrangements in the lodges will be more spread out to allow for physical distancing.

- One-way entry and exit will be used at all facilities to control traffic and reduce crowding.

- Facilities will be cleaned regularly and high-touch areas will be sanitized frequently.

- Chairlifts will be limited to two visitors at opposite ends of the chair, or groups of four visitors who are in lessons and/or within the same family.

- Visitors will be asked to approach the chairlift from the left and right sides in groups of two or four and then form a single file as they approach the loading area.
