Trusted hearing health care

Your hearing health matters at Halton Audiometric Centre. Hearing specialists, Constantine Karolidis and Stephanie Churchill have been helping patients improve their hearing for more than 27 years.

Hearing solutions are customized to each patient's individual needs at Halton Audiometric Centre. Those in need of a hearing test, hearing aids, suffer from hearing loss, tinnitus, and other hearing issues can take comfort in being treated in a professional and safe state-of-the-art facility.

"Our patients inspire us," says Karolidis. "Our mission is to ensure they hear the best they can and not let their hearing loss negatively affect their lifestyle."

As Georgetown's foremost experts on hearing care and hearing technology, the well-trained staff use only the most advanced systems and protocols to ensure patients are fit with hearing aids correctly everytime.

Churchill explains how communication is critical in life. "Our jobs, relationships and social interactions are all more rewarding when we can confidently communicate," she said. "And hearing is vital to that."

"Nearly one in five Canadian adults struggle with hearing loss, a figure that climbs to one in three for people over the age of 65," explains Karolidis. The good news is, with today's modern advancements in hearing aid technology, there is no reason to "just put up with hearing loss anymore".

Churchill and Karolidis are passionate about helping their patients. They both feel fortunate to be helping their community. Karolidis says, "As a Georgetown resident, born and raised, I'm thrilled to be surrounded by a fantastic and supportive community. Georgetown is truly something special."

If you or someone you know has difficulty hearing, or if you already have hearing aids and want to ensure you are enjoying their full benefits, Halton Audiometric Centre invites you to call for your complimentary assessment today.

Bike shop on wheels

Velofix takes bike services on the road. The local bike shop will come directly to you through online booking. The full-service mobile bike shop is hassle-free, customer-friendly and always arrives on time for your scheduled repair.

Owners Sean and Allison Green began their mobile bike service in Hamilton in 2017 after seeing the innovative and unique business model on the hit CBC show Dragons Den in 2014. Velofix originated in Vancouver in 2012 and since then, it has expanded into more than 130 locations across Canada and the United States.

In 2020 Velofix Hamilton expanded its services in Georgetown, Acton, Milton and across the QEW to Niagara.

"2020 was a big year of growth in the bike industry," Sean explains. "With many people getting their old bikes out of storage, our services were in demand."

Velofix offers a wide selection of bike services and repairs, depending on your area. Tune-up packages, commuter and mountain bike service, build your own bike, bike fittings and bike rentals are some of the services on offer. E-bikes and stationary bikes (Peloton or equivalent) are also eligible for service.

Velofix is COVID-19 friendly with minimum interaction with customers. Simply leave your bike outside and the team will grab your bike and perform repairs in their crew truck. "We provide Ride Support if you have group rides," says Allison. It can be part of community cycling promotions by performing safety checks and also incorporated into healthy workplace initiatives.

Velofix is always growing its knowledgeable staff. Sean and Allison say they are thrilled to expand their team by adding a new full-time mechanic, Daniel Horn who honed his skills at MEC (Mountain Equipment Co-op).

Sean is an avid bike enthusiast, working on bikes since his teenage years. He knows Canadians need to get the jump on our relatively short cycling season. "We want to get your bike serviced so you can get back to riding."
