HDSB chair Andrea Grebenc is seeking a meeting with region and school boards to discuss racism.

PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD WANTS CLARITY ON MOTION TO COMBAT RACISM

Halton District School Board wants a clearer explanation from Halton Region on what it can do to combat racism.

Included in a recent regional council motion proposed by Oakville Mayor Rob Burton, was the recommendation that the board do more to ensure inclusive learning spaces and offered the region's "support and advocacy" in its efforts to do so.

The motion was unanimously adopted May 19 following a student presentation to council about lived racism experience at an Oakville high school; the same presenters came before the Halton District School Board (HDSB) on June 2. In a June 7 letter to Halton Region chair Gary Carr, HDSB chair Andrea Grebenc requests the opportunity to present to regional councillors on HDSB's "focused and deliberate initiatives aimed at dismantling racism and other forms of discrimination."

Grebenc also seeks understanding of the support and advocacy alluded to by the region. "Trustees are also keen to pursue further discussions so that we may gain understanding of the region's offer of 'support and advocacy' and its approach to dismantling and eliminating racism and other forms of discrimination," writes Grebenc.

The chair extended an invitation to Carr, the chairs and vice-chairs of the Halton Catholic District School Board and the two Halton French boards of education, to meet and share solutions in a community partnership approach. At the June 16 board meeting, Grebenc said she had heard from fellow board chairs, but had yet to hear from Carr.
