ONLINE EXTORTION ATTEMPTS ON THE RISE: POLICE

MANSOOR TANWEER
mtanweer@metroland.com

Halton police are warning the public about an increase in online extortion attempts, and offering tips on how to avoid being the victim of these types of scams..

They normally start with an unknown person messaging a person on platforms like Snapchat or Instagram.

The scammer then tries to manoeuvre the target into private messaging, and may then attempt to extort the person for money, using images or video obtained through the chat.

Police advise the public to not engage in conversations with strangers, never share intimate images and not to do anything on camera that they would be uncomfortable with friends and family seeing.

Anyone with information on incidents like these can call Det. Cst. Carson McAulay from the 1 District Criminal Investigations Bureau at 905-825-4777 ext. 2442. Tips can also be given to Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222 TIPS (8477).

SUSPECTS SOUGHT IN BANK ROBBERY

lrosella@metroland.com

Halton police are hunting two suspects who robbed a CIBC inside Georgetown Market Place on Jan. 14.

The heist occurred around 5:30 p.m. when, police said, two masked suspects entered the bank, "confronted bank employees and demanded cash." No weapons were seen and no one was injured. The suspects fled the bank on foot and into the mall, police said. Both suspects are described as: male, five foot four, early 20s, slim build, both wearing back clothing and hoodies. Both suspects wore dark blue surgical style masks.

Anyone with information about this robbery is asked to contact the Halton Regional Police Service One District Criminal Investigation Bureau at 905-825-4747 ext. 2416.
