The Ontario Green Party has selected its local candidate who'll be in the running for the next provincial election.

Ryan Kahro will represent the Wellington—Halton Hills Greens on the ballot June 2. Kahro was inspired to put her name forward by the way party leader Mike Schreiner continues to forge ahead with green issues in government, and his ability to work across party lines.

"The past two years of the pandemic have shown us that we can not continue with the systems and policies we have in place now. The current path is not sustainable or just," she said. "We must change course. We can build a greener and healthier world with prosperous and diverse communities to raise our families in. But it's going to take political will."

Kahro grew up on a farm in southern Ontario, where she said she developed her deep respect for agriculture, the environment and the power of working co-operatively. She's now raising her three children on a farm in Rockwood.

"Ryan is exactly the type of leader we need to build a greener and more caring Ontario," said Schreiner. "She is deeply compassionate and is committed to standing up for the groups and individuals that have been forgotten, ignored, or brushed aside for far too long."

Kahro said she wants to ensure a clean, healthy and safe future for everyone that includes prosperous and diverse communities to raise families in.

"It's time for those of us who can see the path to a better future, to step up and lead," she said.
