YOUNG WOMEN INVITED TO FIRE ACADEMY

Young women across the region are encouraged to register for this year's Blaze Fire Academy — and perhaps consider a career in the fire services.

The Oakville Fire Department — in partnership with the Towns of Halton Hills and Milton, and City of Burlington — is inviting applications from Halton-based young women 15-18 years of age to participate in a career camp to explore a future in the fire services-beyond fire suppression.

"Blaze Fire Academy is about inspiring participants to reimagine their future and embrace the fire services," said Oakville Fire Chief Paul Boissonneault.

"As trailblazers that innovate, lead and serve the community with excellence, there are many opportunities to grow in the fire service, and this particular camp is dedicated to young women exploring their potential."

Registration for Blaze Fire Academy (formerly Camp Molly) is open until Friday, July 8 to select 24 participants to attend the camp Aug. 10 and 11 at the Fire Training Campus in Oakville.

Town of Oakville staff said this annual regional fire camp has been enhanced with more immersive and inspirational training components.

In addition to covering various hands-on aspects of the fire service, this year the camp will also include a Q&A session with senior fire services leaders in Halton, and a career information session with post-secondary institutions.

The two-day camp will teach participants about a number of fire response functions such as hazardous material response, search and rescue operations, auto extrication rescues, rope rescue, forcible entry procedures, water rescue and more.

Strategic and tactical aspects of fire response support such as fire investigation, communications, public education, fire prevention are also included.

More details on the registration process and requirements are available at <https://www.oakville.ca/residents/blaze-fire-academy.html>.
