COMMISSIONER OF BUSINESS, ENVIRONMENT, CULTURE APPOINTED

The Town of Halton Hills has appointed Damian Szybalski commissioner of business, environment and culture.

The move comes as part of an organizational structure change that chief administrative officer Chris Mills says will support the town now and into the future.

Szybalski is currently the director of economic development, innovation and culture. The new position will add climate change and asset management to his portfolio, including economic development, culture, affordable housing, equity, diversity and inclusion, truth and reconciliation.

"We have spent considerable time in conducting research, engaging the public and developing strategies to address council's climate change priorities," said Mills. "The reorganization supports us in executing these plans and I am confident in Damian's ability to oversee and leverage the efficiencies amongst his team."

Mills said the change will not add staff and "taking this approach supports our direction to balance fiscal restraint with succession planning."

The restructuring was approved at Monday's council meeting.

"Damian has proven himself time and again," said Mayor Rick Bonnette. "There is nobody better. I am very pleased to congratulate him on his new role."
