METROLAND IS HIRING

Indigenous Reporters, Storytellers, Knowledge Keepers and Teachers
Cover community news across Ontario!
Metroland is looking for enthusiastic and curious freelance Indigenous reporters with a passion for storytelling and interest in community journalism.

You will use your reporting and researching skills to produce engaging content for print, web and social media, with a focus on Indigenous Peoples and communities. Coverage could include profiles of individuals and their accomplishments; stories on health, social, economic and infrastructure issues facing local communities; and information pieces that will serve to educate our readers. Are you a motivated self-starter with insatiable curiosity and an appetite for information? Are you eager to learn and share your knowledge with others? Can you bring together information and ideas to produce straightforward yet compelling text and create eye-catching photos? Do you have a talent for telling stories in written form, and an eye for the stories that need to be told? Can share your knowledge of your community, its accomplishments and needs to inform Indigenous and non-Indigenous readers alike?

If so, please send your resume, cover letter, and writing samples to:

Director of Content Lee Ann Waterman at lawaterman@metroland.com

Candidates are asked to self-identify as First Nations, Inuit, or Métis in their cover letter.

With newspapers including the Parry Sound North Star, Kawartha This Week, Orillia Today, Newmarket Era, Mississauga News, Guelph Mercury Tribune, Hamilton Spectator, Waterloo Region Record, Burlington Post, The Sachem and Niagara This Week, Metroland is the trusted source for local news and information.
