

Fall Fair Flair

Craft judge Pat Beer of Georgetown, looks at a stained glass panel, which won several honors in the craft competitions at Georgetown Fall Fair. The panel, entered by the Credit Valley Artisans, won a first-place ribbon, a Judge's Special rosette and a $50 prize offered by the Arts and Crafts of Georgetown in commemoration of its 50th anniversary.

Photo by Dianne Cornish

Great weather and an excellent assortment of attractions made the 1992 Georgetown Fall Fair a huge success.

The fair featured a concert by the Grapes of Wrath on Friday and Wayne Rostad on Saturday along with the midway and all the agricultural and craft displays and exhibits.

The only glitch came Friday night when someone threw a military-type "Thunderflash" grenade onto the Grapes stage.

The device is used by police and the military in hostage situations. The grenade produces a blinding light and loud explosion when detonated.

No one was injured in Friday's incident and after the concert ended fans left without any problems.

The rest of the fair went without a problem.

Here's a look at some of the people and events that made the annual event a success.

Interesting and powerful vehicles are always a prime attraction at the fair.

Photo by Scott Augustus

In what has become one of the fairs most entertaining attractions, kids from all over town dressed up their favorite pet for the Best Dressed Animal contest.

Photo by Scott Augustus

The Fall Fair would not be the fair without the horses.

Photo by Scott Augustus

Getting the fair set up is the job of hundreds of volunteers. This group were busy Friday morning setting up one of the display booths at the fair grounds.

Photo by Dianne Cornish