Settlement reached

Norval's Maple Lodge Farms resolved its strike dispute last weekend on day seven of a nasty walk-out.

The strike ended Sunday afternoon when union members on the bargaining committee voted to ratify the proposed agreement. The poultry plant says it is now in the process of restoring normal operations.

Maple Lodge released settlement details only through a press release. Monday's release stated that they were pleased to announce the agreement reached with the United Food and Commercial Workers at the Winston Churchill Blvd. plant but that during negotiations the company had stressed the need to improve efficiency to remain competitive in the changing market.

The agreement reached includes a bonus based on a good attendance record, beginning in January of 1993. The company contribution to the pension plan will also be increased by five cents an hour starting next October.
