Battle plans laid for Peel dump fight

early date."

Costea was also directed to write to the IWA, Ontario Environment Minister Ruth Grier and Premier Bob Rae reaffirming the town's concerns about locating a landfill near its border and the Credit River.

"It's horrendous that we're having to go through these costs," Councillor Pam Johnston said while addressing council Monday. It's particularly upsetting because Halton Region, itself, recently went through a costly exercise to get the necessary approval to locate a regional landfill just south of Milton, she said. The estimated cost of putting the Halton site into operation is $150 million.

Mayor Miller affirmed Johnston's comments. The Norval area sites should have been excluded from the short list "if not for any other reason, than just for courtesy for being responsible in our own landfill search," the mayor said. "We've acted responsibly and yet everyone seems to dump on us," he added.

Council's resolutions to continue its fight against having a Peel landfill on Halton Hills' eastern border also accuses the IWA of releasing its short list "in apparent disregard for the concerns" of the town.
