THE FLYER

Some friends were comparing horror tales about their experiences with air travel. There were some great stories about lost luggage, missed connections, bus rides in lieu of flight -- enough to make one believe that the friendly skies were not as friendly as promised. Regardless of horror stories, flying is still the greatest way to get around -- if all systems are working like they were planned. Most of the problems are caused by too many people and too many planes being in one place at a time. The congestion at certain airports, at certain times, is unbelievable.

Not like when Malton Airport (that's Lester B. Pearson, International, Son) was a bunch of one storey steel sheeted buildings and you walked out to a DC 3 and fought your way up the inclined aisle, then fell back into your seat. Some Fun!

I have flown all over North America for a lot of years, and of a certainty, that much flying yields some horror stories but a lot more fond memories. I think back to the awe struck kid, taking his first ride in a single engine, open cockpit, something or other, at the Fall Fair. Wild Stuff!

Or the first flight on a DC 8 (all jet engines - don't you know) We came out of Montreal, on a clear day, and I swore we were heading right for outer space. I thought that Captain was never going to level that bird off. Then he casually announced we are at a cruising altitude of 35,000 feet. Gulp!

Also spent a lot of time riding around on turbo-prop Viscounts and Vanguards. If you were bored, you could watch the engine vibration gradually loosen and finally pop the screw nails holding the inner panels to the plane. Very reassuring!

I was fortunate to fly with Air Canada, as a first class passenger, over several years. To places like Los Angeles, Calgary and Vancouver. First Class was where you were seated in big seats at the front of the plane, and you were served many goodies (just so you understand - Junior) Exceptional food, goodies and service makes a five hour flight pass quickly.

We flew another form of torture which no one should miss. Some wise guy figured out that you could make money by flying a DC 8 load of people to Florida every night and fly another load back to Toronto. Great thinking! It was called the "Red Eye Special" and if your flight was three hours late -- you got to your hotel in Tampa at 4:30 in the morning. Lovely, lovely!

Every once in a while, I would take an "over-Night" flight from Vancouver to Toronto. A DC 9 would leave Vancouver at 11:00 at night, stop in Edmonton and Winnipeg, and be in Toronto at 7:30 in the morning. That is unless Winnipeg was fogged in. Then you flew back to Regina for extra fuel and breakfast, so you could fly directly to Toronto. Yes, yes!

All horror stories aside, flying is still the best possible way to get around. But standing on the cab ramp at 10:00 on a Saturday night, in February, at Terminal One, watching the cabbies fight for position, leaves a little bit to be desired.

But -- the flight was great!
