What's the Address?

It is recommended that emergency telephone numbers be listed by the telephone. What all important address is commonly left off this list?

"Your own address", which is especially helpful to visitors or babysitters who might have to make an emergency call.

In the urban area your house numbers should be large and of a contrasting colour to your home. At night they should be well lit to afford visibility to responding emergency personnel. You should also consider posting house numbers at the rear of your home in the event that a backyard neighbor is required to summon one of the emergency services to your home.

In the rural areas, the Town of Halton Hills has implemented a municipal rural numbering system. Every property in the rural area located on a municipal road has been assigned a specific number. If you are not familiar with the program please contact the Town of Halton Hills Planning Department at 873-2600.

Powwow fundraiser planned for Sunday

Native dancers from New York, Chatham and Georgetown will present a dance demonstration in the Centre Court of the Georgetown Marketplace, Sunday at 12:30 p.m. The demonstration, which will be performed by adults and children, is a fund-raising event for Georgetown's first native powwow to be held May 29-30 at the Gordon Alcott Arena.

Ed Cochrane, one of the key organizers of the upcoming powwow, said a local committee of volunteers is looking for support from town residents and merchants. Donations of money or merchandise prizes are needed for winners of the native dance competitions at the powwow.

Voluntary donations will be accepted from merchants and Georgetown area residents attending Sunday's demonstration. Halton Hills councillor Pam Johnston will represent the town at the event, which will also feature a native crafts display.

Native dancers and drummers representing several tribes from across Canada and the United States are expected to attend the Georgetown powwow. Native food and craft exhibits will also highlight the May event.

It's expected that close to 6,000 people will be welcomed to town over the course of the two-day event. Powwow proceeds, after costs, will be donated to the Georgetown and District Memorial Hospital.
