Composition of taxation group confirmed by regional council

Three Halton Hills' citizens—David McNally and Molly Monahan of Georgetown and Mac Sprowl of Acton—will be meeting before the end of February with other members of the newly-appointed Citizens' Committee on Property Tax Reform for Halton Region.

Regional council endorsed the makeup of the committee last Wednesday.

Composed of 16 voting members, including three citizens from each of Halton's four municipalities, the committee faces a huge task under a tight deadline. It will look at property tax assessment options, other than the proposed implementation of region-wide Market Value Assessment (MVA) in Halton. It'll report back to regional council from time to time, providing interim reports before presenting a final report in early September.

The fourth voting member on the Halton Hills' team is Councillor Rick Bonnette of Acton. Strongly opposed to MVA, Bonnette joined Oakville councillors in voicing strong opposition to the controversial tax proposal and its slated implementation in Halton for 1993.

In early December, regional council voted to re-consider a September decision to go ahead with MVA in '93. After hearing 56 delegations, with only three favoring the new tax scheme, council agreed to set up the citizens' committee in hopes of reaching a consensus which will be acceptable to taxpayers across Halton.

The committee will make recommendations to regional council on a preferred method of property tax assessment. A two-third majority vote will be required of regional council to consider the proposed measure. Failing that, MVA will become a reality in Halton in 1994.

"We expect to meet, for the first time, later this month," newly-appointed committee chairperson Bob Beach of Burlington told reporters last week during an interview at the Regional Centre, in Oakville.

Beach, a property appraiser, has 27 years of experience in property assessment. He retired four years ago from his post as executive director of the Ontario Ministry of Revenue's property assessment program. Before that, he was regional assessment commissioner for Halton/Peel for 17 years.

"The committee will be open-minded and unbiased," Beach said, noting that every aspect of property tax assessment will be reviewed. Committee meetings will be open to the public and presentations about property tax assessment alternatives will be made by committee members and Halton ratepayers, he added.

"We hope to report back to regional council as soon as possible," Beach said.

At its first meeting, the citizens' committee will review its terms of reference and set up a meeting timetable. It will also review background data.

Georgetown Hospital sponsors community transplants workshop

Georgetown and District Memorial Hospital will sponsor a two hour community workshop called "Transplants Work".

This session, to be held tomorrow, at 2 p.m. in the Hospital's Activity Room at the Bennett Centre, features guest speaker, Christina Marshall of the Multiple Organ Retrieval and Exchange (MORE).

As regional coordinator of MORE, Ms. Marshall will provide attendees with an enlightening overview of the organ donation program and its importance to the community. In addition, an organ recipient will be on hand to present a personal perspective.

The workshop has been organized by the Hospital's Organ Donation Committee as a service to the Halton Hills' community.

For more information, call Georgetown Hospital at 873-0111, Extension 285 or 197.

Established in 1961, Georgetown and District Memorial Hospital is a 112-bed primary, acute care and long-term-care facility. As a primary health care provider, the Hospital is committed to identifying the health care needs for Halton Hills, and developing programs in cooperation with other health agencies.
