Reform Party has dollar doubts

"The statement from Finance Minister Don Mazankowski that the government is committed to cutting the country's deficit is hard to take seriously." This comment comes from Halton-Peel Reform Party candidate, Dick MacDuffee.

"We've been hearing this same story from this government for the last eight years and still the deficit has grown in leaps and bounds," he said. "If the finance ministers had been really serious about doing something with our national debt, they would have started tackling the problem as soon as their government was elected for its first term eight years ago. They should have immediately started making serious cuts in government spending and the cuts should have been even deeper than those recently announced when the deficit was considerably smaller.

"A recent report from the C.D. Howe Institute, a private research organization, predicts that Canada may soon be in the same situation as countries like Italy and Sweden which have been forced to adopt extreme austerity measures to stabilize collapsing economies. We can still avoid that if our government will adopt a responsible fiscal policy with a long term plan rather than one based on now-and-then stabs at the problem whenever the political climate is right.

"I would like to see all parties adopt the same policy as the Reform Party - balance the budget in three years or call an election. Without a firm commitment like this, we can never be sure that any Canadian government will show the fiscal leadership we so desperately need."
