Learn to save a life

Picture this...It's summertime, and you and your spouse are relaxing in lounge chairs after a leisurely swim. Suddenly he begins to complain of pressure around his chest and shortness of breath. Then without another word, he slumps over in his chair.

Would you know what to do? If you've been trained in CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation), then you would have the skills to respond immediately.

For people wishing to learn this essential emergency life-saving technique, the upcoming "Save-A-Heart" course is for you.

On Saturday, April 3rd, Georgetown and District Memorial Hospital, Halton Hills Ambulance Service, Fire Department, Parks and Recreation and the Halton Regional Police will jointly sponsor two, half-day workshops at Georgetown High School.

Carolyn Harding, Georgetown Hospital's Manager of Education explains why the hospital and other organizations decided to offer this service to the community.

"Heart disease remains the 'number one' killer in Canada with over 50,000 people a year dying of heart attacks. More importantly, two thirds of those individuals die before ever reaching the hospital. Providing citizens with a locally-held, inexpensive workshop such as the Save-A-Heart Blitz, can help reduce the statistics in our community."

The four-hour CPR course will run from 8:30 am to 12:30 pm or 12:30 to 4:30 pm. Participants will learn how to:

Reduce the risks leading to heart disease

Recognize heart attack signs and signals

Who to call in an emergency

Perform CPR

Help a choking victim

This course, which meets all the guidelines of the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario, will be conducted by trained CPR instructors.

Registration is limited to 200 participants. The fee is only $10 per person (minimum age of 14 years), with all proceeds going towards Georgetown and District Memorial Hospital.

For more information and registration details, contact Georgetown Hospital's Carolyn Harding or Myra Britton before March 23rd, 873-0111.
