

Georgetown Optimist Club supports the law

By Oksana Buhel

In recognition of Respect for Law Week, the Optimist Club of Georgetown honored two local residents and two local police officers last Tuesday for making outstanding contributions to law and order. Adam Cook of Georgetown, Robin Peever of Acton, and Halton Regional Police Service Village Constables Bill Riddle and Nick Leoni, of Acton and Georgetown respectively, received plaques and commendations.

Cook saved eight lives on July 1, 1992, when he awoke during the night, surrounded by thick smoke. The 10-year-old woke his mother, who woke other family members and basement tenants, and all were able to escape. The boy was also honored Wednesday evening at the Halton Regional Police Service annual awards night.

Peever was recognized for assisting two officers in an arrest November 28. One officer was kicked in the face by a suspect and knocked down. Peever helped the fallen officer, then helped the other officer get the suspect into the police car.

Constables Riddle and Leoni were both praised for their contributions to the force and for extra-curricular commitments.

Riddle is involved with the Acton Social Service and Information Centre, the Acton Open Door Teen Drop-In Centre, the Acton Community Consultation Committee, various seniors' programs, organizing fraud seminars, boy scouts and food banks.

Leoni is similarly dedicated, donating time to seniors programs, the Georgetown Open Door Teen Drop-In Centre, board member of the Business Improvement Association, the Georgetown

Community Consultation Committee, organizing fraud seminars, and various fund-raising events.

Both constables spend time at the local high schools, providing information and answering any questions.

Mayor Russ Miller, Councillor Marilyn Serjeantson, Halton Regional Police Service District Superintendent Rick Dawson, Detective Sergeant Mike Kingston and Optimist Club chair John Horning were among those present at the special evening.
